

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention describes molecular arrays that can be stacked to generate three-dimensional arrays for detection of molecules of interest in a sample, determination of composition of a complex mixture of molecules, and comparison of composition of two or more samples of molecules, such molecules including DNA, RNA and proteins. Methods to fabricate and use such arrays are also described.